

JASON SINAY

THE MOUNTAIN

THE NEW DOUBLE ALBUM AVAILABLE OCT 24TH

Celebrated singer/songwriter and long-time former guitarist for Mike Campbell's Dirty Knobs, Jason Sinay, who has played and/or recorder with Keith Richards, Neil Young, Bob Weir, Jackson Brown and many others – will release his ambitious new double album The Mountain, October 24th, 2025.

After exiting the Dirty Knobs after 2022's External Combustion, Sinay has been laser-focused on his solo career. The Mountain, produced by and often co-written with producer Martin Pradler (Ry Cooder, John Mayer, The Black Crowes), is his magnificent first offering of this brave new era.

"I was ultimately left feeling like I had more to say, not only as a guitarist, but as a singer and a songwriter," Sinay admits. "I hit a breaking point on the road." The period immediately following his Dirty Knobs membership was an extraordinarily difficult one. But it led him to buckle down, and revisit material that had been dormant for years, or decades. This led to the majestic The Mountain – by far the most important solo record he's made in a long career.

The first disc features a full band with a variable lineup: Sinay on vocals and guitar; Bruce Watson on guitar; Phil Parlapiano on keys, mandolin and squeezebox; Doug Livingston on pedal steel; Lance Morrison or Mike Mennell on bass; and Matt Laug or Herman Matthews on drums. Separately, these players have been behind the curtain with rock's best and brightest, from John Prine to Glen Campbell to Elton John and beyond. The second reprises the entire program in a stripped down, acoustic format.

By facing his darknesses head on, Sinay came up with his truest, most realized album of his career. Even after decades in the industry, the zenith of this mountain might just be the beginning of his journey.
